Marco Aponte-Moreno, PhD, is an actor and academic. He has been performing in theater and film for the past fifteen years. He obtained his PhD from the Graduate Center, City University of New York, specializing in Hugo Chávez's political discourse. His current academic research focuses on the role of language and theater in leadership development. Aponte-Moreno teaches leadership and communication at University College London, where he is also the director of the graduate program in management.

John Eric Baugher, PhD, is associate professor of sociology at the University of Southern Maine. His recent research and teaching activities concern emotional and spiritual dimensions of transformational learning, bereavement, and end-of-life care. Baugher is a member of the Association for Contemplative Mind in Higher Education and the social science editor for the Journal of Contemplative Inquiry. He provides training in spiritual care to hospice and other organizations, and for more than two decades he has been following the lead of dying and grieving persons as a certified hospice volunteer.

Sylvia van de Bunt-Kokhuis, PhD, is co-director of SERVUS, the Servant-Leadership Centre for Research and Education at the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam. She has an international career in business, corporate governance, and academia. She has published extensively in international academic journals on
