ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Brigid Callahan Harrison

Brigid Harrison specializes in the civic engagement and political participation of Americans, especially the Millennial Generation, the U.S. Congress, and the Presidency. Brigid has taught American government for over fifteen years. She takes particular pride in creating in the classroom a learning experience that shapes students' lifelong understanding of American politics, sharpens their critical thinking about American government, and encourages their participation in civic life. She enjoys supervising student internships in political campaigns and government and is a frequent commentator in print and electronic media on national and New Jersey politics. She received her B.A. from The Richard Stockton College, her M.A. from Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, and her Ph.D. from Temple University. Harrison lives in Galloway, New Jersey, and has three children: Caroline (15), Alexandra (9), and John (6). Born and raised in New Jersey, Harrison is a fan of Bruce Springsteen and professor of political science and law at Montclair State University.

Jean Wahl Harris

Jean Harris's research interests include political socialization and engagement, federalism, and the evolution and institutionalization of the first ladyship and the vice presidency. She regularly teaches introductory courses in local, state, and national government and upper level courses in public administration and public policy. In the classroom, Jean seeks to cultivate students' participation in the political conversation so vital to American civic life and to convey the profound opportunities that the American political system affords an active, critical, and informed citizenry. She earned her B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. from the State University of New York at Binghamton. In 1994 the University of Scranton named her its CASE (Council for Advancement and Support of Education) professor of the year. She was an American Council on Education (ACE) Fellow during the 2007–08 academic year. Jean lives in Nicholson, Pennsylvania, with her husband Michael. She enjoys reading on her deck overlooking the Endless Mountains of Northeast Pennsylvania.
