2	The nature of cognitive linguistics: assumptions and commitments	27
2.1	Two key commitments	27
2.1.1	The 'Generalisation Commitment'	28
2.1.2	The 'Cognitive Commitment'	40
2.2	The embodied mind	44
2.2.1	Embodied experience	45
2.2.2	Embodied cognition	46
2.2.3	Experiential realism	47
2.3	Cognitive semantics and cognitive approaches to grammar	48
2.4	Summary	50
	Further reading	50
	Exercises	52
3	Universals and variation in language, thought and experience	54
3.1	Universals in thought and language	55
3.1.1	Typological universals	57
3.1.2	Universals in formal linguistics	60
3.1.3	Universals in cognitive linguistics	63
3.2	Cross-linguistic patterns in semantic systems	68
3.2.1	Patterns in the conceptualisation of space	68
3.2.2	Patterns in the conceptualisation of time	75
3.3	Cross-linguistic variation in semantic systems	87
3.3.1	Variation in the conceptualisation of space	87
3.3.2	Variation in the conceptualisation of time	92
3.4	Linguistic relativity and cognitive linguistics	95
3.4.1	Whorf and the Linguistic Relativity Principle	96
3.4.2	Language as a shaper of thought	98
3.4.3	The cognitive linguistics position	101
3.5	Summary	101
	Further reading	102
	Exercises	105
4	Language in use: knowledge of language, language change and language acquisition	108
4.1	Language in use	109
4.1.1	A usage event	109
4.1.2	The relationship between usage and linguistic structure	111
4.1.3	Comprehension and production	112
4.1.4	Context	112

4.1.5	Frequency	114
4.2	Cognitive Grammar	114
4.2.1	Abstraction, schematisation and language use	115
4.2.2	Schemas and their instantiations	115
4.2.3	Partial sanction	116
4.2.4	The non-reductive nature of schemas	117
4.2.5	Frequency in schema formation	118
4.3	A usage-based approach to language change	120
4.3.1	Historical linguistics and language change	121
4.3.2	The Utterance Selection Theory of language change	123
4.3.3	The Generalised Theory of Selection and the Theory of Utterance Selection	125
4.3.4	Causal mechanisms for language change	127
4.4	The usage-based approach to language acquisition	133
4.4.1	Empirical findings in language acquisition	134
4.4.2	The cognitive view: socio-cognitive mechanisms in language acquisition	136
4.4.3	Comparing the generative view of language acquisition	140
4.5	Summary	146

Part II Cognitive Semantics
	Introduction	153
5	What is cognitive semantics?	156
5.1	Guiding principles	157
5.1.1	Conceptual structure is embodied	157
5.1.2	Semantic structure is conceptual structure	158
5.1.3	Meaning representation is encyclopaedic	160
5.1.4	Meaning construction is conceptualisation	162
5.2	Phenomena investigated within cognitive semantics	163
5.2.1	The bodily basis of meaning	163
5.2.2	Conceptual structure	165
5.2.3	Encyclopaedic semantics	166
5.2.4	Mappings	167
5.2.5	Categorisation	168
5.2.6	Word meaning and polysemy	169
5.3	Methodology	170
5.4	Some comparisons with formal approaches to semantics	171

5.5	Summary	172
	Further reading	173
	Exercises	174
6	Embodiment and conceptual structure	176
6.1	Image schemas	177
6.1.1	What is an image schema?	178
6.1.2	Properties of image schemas	179
6.1.3	Image schemas and linguistic meaning	189
6.1.4	A provisional list of image schemas	190
6.1.5	Image schemas and abstract thought	190
6.2	Conceptual structure	191
6.2.1	Semantic structure	192
6.2.2	Schematic systems	194
6.3	Summary	201
	Further reading	201
	Exercises	202
7	The encyclopaedic view of meaning	206
7.1	Dictionaries versus encyclopaedias	207
7.1.1	The dictionary view	207
7.1.2	Problems with the dictionary view	210
7.1.3	Word meaning versus sentence meaning	213
7.1.4	The encyclopaedic view	215
7.2	Frame semantics	222
7.2.1	What is a semantic frame?	222
7.2.2	Frames in cognitive psychology	222
7.2.3	The COMMERCIAL EVENT frame	225
7.2.4	Speech event frames	228
7.2.5	Consequences of adopting a frame-based model	229
7.3	The theory of domains	230
7.3.1	What is a domain?	230
7.3.2	Basic, image-schematic and abstract domains	232
7.3.3	Other characteristics of domains	235
7.3.4	Profile/base organisation	236
7.3.5	Active zones	238
7.4	The perceptual basis of knowledge representation	240
7.5	Summary	243
	Further reading	244
	Exercises	245

8	Categorisation and idealised cognitive models	248
8.1	Categorisation and cognitive semantics	249
8.1.1	The classical theory	251
8.1.2	The definitional problem	252
8.1.3	The problem of conceptual fuzziness	253
8.1.4	The problem of prototypicality	254
8.1.5	Further problems	254
8.2	Prototype theory	255
8.2.1	Principles of categorisation	255
8.2.2	The categorisation system	256
8.2.3	The vertical dimension	256
8.2.4	The horizontal dimension	264
8.2.5	Problems with prototype theory	268
8.3	The theory of idealised cognitive models	269
8.3.1	Sources of typicality effects	270
8.3.2	Radial categories as a further source of typicality effects	275
8.3.3	Addressing the problems with prototype theory	278
8.4	The structure of ICMs	279
8.5	Summary	281
	Further reading	282
	Exercises	283
9	Metaphor and metonymy	286
9.1	Literal versus figurative language	287
9.1.1	Literal and figurative language as complex concepts	287
9.1.2	Can the distinction be maintained?	289
9.2	What is metaphor?	293
9.3	Conceptual Metaphor Theory	296
9.3.1	The unidirectionality of metaphor	296
9.3.2	Motivation for target and source	297
9.3.3	Metaphorical entailments	298
9.3.4	Metaphor systems	299
9.3.5	Metaphors and image schemas	300
9.3.6	Invariance	301
9.3.7	The conceptual nature of metaphor	303
9.3.8	Hiding and highlighting	303
9.4	Primary Metaphor Theory	304
9.4.1	Primary and compound metaphors	304
9.4.2	Experiential correlation	305
9.4.3	Motivating primary metaphors	306
9.4.4	Distinguishing primary and compound metaphors	307

9.5	What is metonymy?	310
9.6	Conceptual metonymy	314
9.6.1	Metonymy as an access mechanism	315
9.6.2	Metonymy-producing relationships	316
9.6.3	Vehicles for metonymy	317
9.7	Metaphor-metonymy interaction	318
9.8	Summary	321
	Further reading	322
	Exercises	325
10	Word meaning and radial categories	328
10.1	Polysemy as a conceptual phenomenon	329
10.2	Words as radial categories	331
10.3	The full-specification approach	333
10.3.1	Image schema transformations	337
10.3.2	Metaphorical extensions	339
10.4	Problems with the full-specification approach	339
10.5	The Principled Polysemy approach	342
10.5.1	Distinguishing between senses	342
10.5.2	Establishing the prototypical sense	344
10.5.3	Illustration of a radial category based on Principled Polysemy	347
10.5.4	Beyond prepositions	348
10.6	The importance of context for polysemy	352
10.6.1	Usage context: subsenses	353

The nature of the book

This book represents a general introduction to the area of theoretical linguistics known as cognitive linguistics. It consists of three main parts. Part I provides an overview of some of the main aims, assumptions and controversies of the cognitive linguistics enterprise and provides an indicative sketch of some of the descriptive analyses and theoretical positions that are representative of cognitive linguistics. The next two parts focus on the two best-developed research frameworks in cognitive linguistics: cognitive semantics (Part II), and cognitive approaches to grammar (Part III). Although some cognitive linguists (notably Langacker) have extended their theories to account for phonology as well as meaning and grammar, we will be mostly concerned with meaning and grammar in this book, and will have little to say about phonology. In part, this reflects the fact that phonology has received relatively little attention within cognitive linguistics (although this situation is changing), and in part this reflects our own interests.

Who is this book for?

Our aim has been to provide a reasonably comprehensive general introduction to cognitive linguistics that is accessible enough for undergraduate students at the university level, while also serving as a work of reference both for linguists and for scholars from neighbouring disciplines. While writing for accessibility we have also retained some terms (and included relevant citations in the running text) so that readers (including research students and professional linguists unfamiliar with cognitive linguistics, as well as interested readers from

This book represents a general introduction to the area of theoretical linguistics known as cognitive linguistics. It consists of three main parts. Part I provides an overview of some of the main aims, assumptions and commitments of the cognitive linguistics enterprise, and provides an indicative sketch of some of the descriptive analyses and theoretical positions that are representative of cognitive linguistics. The next two parts focus on the two best-developed research frameworks in cognitive linguistics: cognitive semantics (Part II), and cognitive approaches to grammar (Part III). Although some cognitive linguists (notably Langacker) have extended their theories to account for phonology as well as meaning and grammar, we will be mainly concerned with meaning and grammar in this book, and will have little to say about phonology. In part, this reflects the fact that phonology has received relatively little attention within cognitive linguistics (although this situation is changing), and in part this reflects our own interests.

Who is this book for?

Our aim has been to provide a reasonably comprehensive general introduction to cognitive linguistics that is accessible enough for undergraduate students at the university level, while also serving as a work of reference both for linguists and for scholars from neighbouring disciplines. While striving for accessibility, we have also retained considerable detail (including relevant citations in the running text), so that readers (including research students and professional linguists unfamiliar with cognitive linguistics, as well as interested readers from neighbouring disciplines), are provided with a route into the primary literature. In selecting the material presented, and in the presentation itself, we have attempted to provide as balanced a perspective as possible. However, cognitive linguistics represents a collection of approaches rather than a unified theoretical framework, and different authors often take quite distinct positions on similar phenomena, sometimes relying on distinct terminology. It follows that what we present here under the name of 'cognitive linguistics' should be understood as a presentation of the cognitive approach 'as we see it'.

Using the book

We have designed the book so that, in general terms, each chapter builds on preceding chapters. In particular, our decision to present the material on cognitive semantics (Part II) before the material on cognitive approaches to grammar (Part III) reflects the fact that cognitive grammarians assume much of what has been established by cognitive semanticists in developing their approaches. However, because different readers and course tutors will need to use the book in ways tailored to their specific objectives, we have attempted to make Part II and Part III of the book relatively independent so that they can be used for separate courses. The book has sufficient coverage to provide the basis for a number of different courses. We outline below suggestions for 'routes' through the book for three different types of course, assuming 12 teaching weeks at the rate of one chapter per week. Of course, these suggestions can be adjusted depending on teaching time available, level of course and so on. The suggestions made here reflect undergraduate courses taught at the University of Sussex, where this textbook was piloted prior to publication.
