About the Authors

Peter Elbow

Peter Elbow is Professor of English and Director of the Writing Program at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Before writing A Community of Writers, he wrote two other books about writing: Writing Without Teachers and Writing with Power: Techniques for Mastering the Writing Process. He is author of a book of essays about learning and teaching, Embracing Contraries, in addition to What Is English?, which explores current issues in the profession of English, Oppositions in Chaucer, and numerous essays about writing and teaching. His most recent book is Writing For—Not Against: Essays on Writing and the Teaching of Writing.

He has taught at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Franconia College, Evergreen State College, and the State University of New York at Stony Brook—where for five years he directed the Writing Program. He served for four years on the Executive Council of the Modern Language Association and was a member of the Executive Committee of the Conference on College Composition and Communication. He has given talks and workshops at many colleges and universities.

He attended Williams College and Harvard University and has an M.A. from Exeter College, Oxford University, and a Ph.D. from Brandeis University.

Pat Belanoff

Pat Belanoff is Associate Professor of English at the State University of New York–Stony Brook. She has been both president of the SUNY Council on Writing and a member of the College Steering Committee of NCTE. Pat is a coauthor (with Betsy Rorschach and Mia Oberlink) of The Right Handbook, now in its second edition. She has also coedited (with Marcia Dickson) Portfolios: Process and Product and (with Peter Elbow and Sheryl Fontaine) Nothing Begins With an N: New Investigations of Freewriting. Pat has a doctorate in medieval literature from New York University and continues to teach and publish in this area, too.
